Exhibit E

```
1
                  IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
                 FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS
 2
     E.G., a minor, BY CHRISTINA
 3
     RAQUEL, individually as parent)
     and next friend of E.G.,
 4 Plaintiff,
 5
          VS.
                                      Case No. 15-cv-702-NJR
 6
     ABBOTT LABORATORIES, INC.,
 7
                                     May 23, 2017
                     Defendant.
 8
                 JURY TRIAL DAY/VOLUME II - P.M. SESSION
 9
              BEFORE THE HONORABLE NANCY J. ROSENSTENGEL
                   UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT JUDGE
10
                              APPEARANCES
11
     FOR PLAINTIFF:
                                 John E. Williams, Esq.
12
                                 John T. Boundas, Esq.
                                 Williams Kherkher
                                 8441 Gulf Freeway, Suite 600
13
                                 Houston, TX 77017
                                 (713) 230-2200
14
15
     FOR DEFENDANT:
                                 Joel H. Smith, Esq.
                                 Bowman and Brooke LLP
16
                                 1441 Main St., Suite 1200
                                 Columbia, SC 29201
                                 (803) 726-7422
17
18
                                 Dan H. Ball, Esq.
                                 Bryan Cave - St. Louis
19
                                 211 N. Broadway, Suite 3600
                                 St. Louis, MO 63102
2.0
                                 (314) 259-2000
21
     REPORTED BY:
                                 Laura A. Esposito, RPR, CRR
                                 U.S. District Court
2.2
                                 750 Missouri Avenue
                                 East St. Louis, IL 62201
23
                                 (618) 482-9481
                                 Laura Esposito@ilsd.uscourts.gov
24
          Proceedings recorded by mechanical stenography;
25 transcript produced by computer-aided transcription.
```

has read the information, because this information is out there and well-known, and because Abbott has put it out there, she has read it and she says, "These are the risks."

The best evidence that these doctors knew this was what they told her. They told her about the risks of birth defects. And Dr. Meer, when she describes it -- you're not going to hear Dr. Meer in the plaintiff's case but we'll play her video for you. Listen to what she says. She gives a thorough, complete description of exactly what she would tell patients at this time period, and her record says that she did this. Her medical record said she told this patient, so obviously she has been well-informed.

But it didn't work as well as it had in the past because she was heavy. She went back. Dr. Giese had her go up to 2,000 milligrams. She went up to 2,000 milligrams and it caused some problems for her. But Dr. Giese obviously knew about risks. He had her sign the consent form. There is a form at El Hogar that they sign and it says the risks have been explained to me, so obviously, again, he's making a prescription of an increase of a thousand milligrams. He's going to make sure that she's re-warned because he knows this risk.

Eleven days later she comes back. She's been on a bus and defecated in her pants because of an upset stomach, which can be a risk of Depakote. And she's defecated in her

Defendant's Opening Statement

```
1
                  IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
                 FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS
 2
     E.G., a minor, BY CHRISTINA
 3
     RAQUEL, individually as parent)
     and next friend of E.G., 4
                     Plaintiff,
 5
                                      Case No. 15-cv-702-NJR
          VS.
 6
     ABBOTT LABORATORIES, INC., 7
                                      June 7, 2017
                     Defendant.
 8
                        JURY TRIAL DAY/VOLUME XI
 9
              BEFORE THE HONORABLE NANCY J. ROSENSTENGEL
                   UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT JUDGE
10
                              APPEARANCES
11
     FOR PLAINTIFF:
                                 John E. Williams, Esq.
12
                                 John T. Boundas, Esq.
                                 Williams Kherkher
                                 8441 Gulf Freeway, Suite 600
13
                                 Houston, TX 77017
                                 (713) 230-2200
14
15
     FOR DEFENDANT:
                                 Joel H. Smith, Esq.
                                 Bowman and Brooke LLP
16
                                 1441 Main St., Suite 1200
                                 Columbia, SC 29201
                                 (803) 726-7422
17
18
                                 Dan H. Ball, Esq.
                                 Bryan Cave - St. Louis
19
                                 211 N. Broadway, Suite 3600
                                 St. Louis, MO 63102
2.0
                                 (314) 259-2000
21
     REPORTED BY:
                                 Laura A. Esposito, RPR, CRR
                                 U.S. District Court
2.2
                                 750 Missouri Avenue
                                 East St. Louis, IL 62201
23
                                 (618) 482-9481
                                 Laura Esposito@ilsd.uscourts.gov
24
           Proceedings recorded by mechanical stenography;
25 transcript produced by computer-aided transcription.
```

pregnancy, and said she discussed other treatment options.

Okay. How much more information does someone need to say that they would have done something differently? This is spina bifida we're talking about.

And I want you to know, I'm not saying she's done something wrong. I'm saying she probably did something right to take care of herself. It was probably a good decision to take this medication.

Then she goes to see Dr. Giese. And while Dr. Giese doesn't have a great memory of it, we do know that on the same day she saw Dr. Giese she signed a consent form. Now, Dr. Franklin said it was a fixed rule that nurses went over these with the patients, so I'm assuming that that was done here, but she did sign it. And, again, risk and benefits were talked about, and possible alternative treatments. That's two times in a row in four days.

And then she goes to see Dr. Han. And what does Dr. Han say? The same thing really. "I reviewed different options with her." What did he testify? He said, "I would have told her the risks and benefits of each and the risks and benefits of staying on Depakote." And he didn't think it was going to work. He thought dropping down to 1500 milligrams would not be therapeutic. He didn't know that for a year she'd been on a thousand and 1250 and had no evidence of mania. But she knew. She knew her medications.

2.0

She knew what she was doing. She is no shrinking violet when it comes to telling her doctors what she needs to do.

What does she do? She elected to try the 1500 milligrams that he had suggested -- that she had suggested. And what did he say he would have told her that he knew at that time? He said he would have told her that the two specific alternatives that he offered, Seroquel, which is antipsychotic -- she was already on two -- and Lamictal, which is the other mood stabilizer that she decided not to take, based on his description of what their benefits were as well as their risks. He knew.

So in all three situations she was warned. These doctors knew enough about the risk of this medication not just to say in a deposition, I know about it, but to document in their records three times within 15 days that they actually proposed alternatives, gave warnings. Signed consent forms. It's all right there.

But you heard her deposition and you heard this constant refrain: "Could be. I don't recall." Every time she was asked, not just about Depakote side effects or Depakote risks -- and there are other risks, risks to her, risks to the baby from these other medications -- she said, "Could be. I don't recall," over and over and over again. Why is that? Why is that? Because if she were to tell us that she does remember, what would that do today? Would we be here today? Is this credible?

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

Now, I've told you, I'm not blaming Ms. Raquel for taking this medication. I want you to understand her. I also want you to understand something else: She's got a lot to gain by not remembering.

So she goes back to El Hogar in 2008. She sees the same doctor. You know, I'm not sure it makes sense that you would go back to the same doctor who had failed to tell you about a spina bifida risk. I'm not sure that makes sense to start with, but may have. And her options were probably limited, frankly, right? But wouldn't you expect her to walk in and see Dr. Franklin, her regular doctor who she's confided in over the most intimate details of her life and say, Dr. Franklin, why didn't you tell me? I have a child now who's -- why didn't you tell me? But she didn't. She tells us that the reason she did -- in her deposition she said, "I just never went back and asked them." She's being treated by the same doctor. That's false. She did go back. But she never asked. Wouldn't you? I mean the most impressive thing to ever happen in your life, to have a child who's disabled, wouldn't you go back and say -wouldn't you be feeling like, I've been deceived, I didn't -- you didn't do your job, you committed malpractice, and you'd go back and say, Hey, why did you do that? Why didn't you tell me? Unless they did.